This table represents 22 years worth of reported crimes for forcible rape and sexual assault, arrests for forcible rape/ sexual assaults compared to arrests for prostitution in which the complainant is a law enforcement officer who may or may not have had sex with the alleged prostitute in order to elicit a 'crime' and prove his case in court.

In many cases, a charge of disorderly conduct is used if the arresting officer does not have sufficient evidence to prove a prostitution violation has taken place, which is why those arrests are included in this table. Stats are from the Department of Justice Criminal Statistics and the links to the source pages can be found on our website.
